Administrative History

Originally established as the Parmly Foundation for research in hearing in October 1942 at the Illinois Institute of Technology through a trust fund created by Samuel P. Parmly, Jr., a Chicago businessman, the Parmly Hearing Institute seeks to solve problems in hearing through research. From its inception, Parmly regarded hearing difficulties as a bio-physics problem and concentrated its work on the physics of hearing. In 1957, the foundation received a grant from the National Institutes of Health and began a study of the psychological factors in hearing loss. By 1959 Parmly research revolved around three aspects: Physics, Psychology, and Physiology. The expansion of research to areas other than physics led to the dissolution of the Parmly Trust at IIT and the affiliation of the Institute with Loyola University in 1960. Parmly has had six directors since its inception: Peter J. Mills (1943-1966); A. J. Derbyshire (1960-1963); Horacio J.A. Rimoldi (1969-1970); Terrence Dolan (1970-1977); William A. Yost (1977-2001); and Richard R. Fay (2001-present). In 1959 the scientific personnel at Parmly formed a non-profit corporation and changed the name from the Parmly Foundation to the Parmly Hearing Institute.

Scope and Content
